Yoga Teacher. Owner.

I am most passionate about global access to clean water. People should not suffer or die from preventable illnesses caused by waterborne pathogens. Basic medical care and education, especially for children, are also close to my heart. I founded YRI with a vision of bringing people together to explore the world while providing these essentials to those most in need.

I am over the moon passionate about helping women build families through yoga. One in six women suffer from infertility. Through my teachings I offer community, support, and safety to women and their partners dealing with this diagnosis. After personally experiencing infertility, I was led to teach empowerment through yoga and help women trust their bodies again.

I am passionate about contributing to the work of my ancestors. Through yoga and storytelling, I am committed to illuminating voices that are often silenced. Working closely with my community and communities that have been abandoned, yet still exist, inspires me. Tapping into my bliss while working with others who are learning how to find theirs is my passion.

I'm passionate about leading a heart-centered life. When I stay connected to what really lights me up, I better serve my community. I do that by teaching yoga—one of my biggest loves. Teaching yoga reminds me to embrace and share my uniqueness, stay learning, always keep it real, and inspire others to do the same. Sprinkle in some leaps of faith? Yes, please!

Mary Clare Sweet Omaha. Teacher. Founder. Lotus House of Yoga.

Passion is being devoted to what you love. First you must know what you love. I love music and movement. I love uncovering stillness and watching it turn into fire. I love feeling alive and engaged. When I am devoted to feeling alive, I am passionate. Jason Bowman says, "In nourishing our daily lives with an appetite for adventure we recognize that in living comes burning, in burning comes passion and in passion lies the potential to follow the whims of the heart all the way to infinity." Let your passion take you to infinity, I will meet you there.
